

Education Programmes for Children and Young People

March 2011

Publicity Line

The NFCC is committed to encouraging the education of all children in fire safety, which is recognised as a key long term prevention activity.

NFCC Prevention Coordination Committee National Prevention Committee (NPC) actively encourages fire safety education but does not endorse any specific product or group.

The NPC acknowledges that individual fire and rescue services (FRSs) need to develop their own strategies and consider the delivery mechanisms available to them locally.

England ✓

Wales ✓

Scotland ✗

Northern Ireland ✗

NFCC will:

- The NPC is aware that many fire and rescue services already work with a variety of well developed products and ask services to continue to share their experiences with others as examples of notable practice
- A number of case studies focussing on successful local initiatives are already available on the CFOA website
- CFOA has supported partnership organisations in the development of a number of products aimed at educating children and young people in fire safety.
- However it is recognised that there are many programmes available to individual FRSs and the selection of the most suitable resources will be based on the services own requirements